THE FOURTH COMMANDMENT.

The recent agitation of the Sunday question has led many thinking people to inquire into the actual origin of the institution of the Christian Sabbath, and this has naturally recalled to the remembrance of some two very able articles which have appeared in the Wesiminster Review. The publishers have assued these two articles, partially condensed, in next pamphlet form, under the above title. It is believed that their reproduction in cheap form will tend to englishen those who desire information on this subject, and help to settle a question which, sooner or later, must be brought to an end.
